This was the first video I've seen that explained my experience without making me feel arrogant. I've never looked down on people who love sports or celebrity news. I just can't force myself to stay interested. Put me in a conversation about psychology, history, or science and suddenly I can talk for hours. I guess our curiosity simply speaks different languages.

I've spent too much time on YouTube, and this is the 22nd video that explains why the narratives feel the way they do. They've taken my arrogance to the next level without making me feel arrogant. Now I feel like I can fly.
